SERVINGS OF FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

The Big Why:

Fruits and vegetables are like super fuel for your body! Eating at least 5 servings every day helps you grow strong, feel full of energy, and keep your brain sharp. They're packed with vitamins, fiber, and color—all the stuff your body needs to fight off germs, stay healthy, and play hard.

Why did the apple go to the gym?

To work on its core!

Take the Challenge

What comes first?

Can you number the pictures in the right order to show how a fruit or vegetable gets from a tiny seed to your plate? Think about what happens along the way! Draw your favorite fruit or vegetable in the "Ready to Eat!" box.

Ready to eat!

Get Moving!

Shout out a vegetable or fruit and do a special move:

Banana → wiggle like a banana

Carrot → jump up and down 5 times

Strawberry → bend and touch your toes 5 times

Broccoli → grow tall like a tree

Watermelon → big arm circles

Pea → curl up into a tiny ball, then POP!

Apple “Nachos”:

You need:

- Apple slices
- Sunflower-seed butter or peanut butter (if allergies aren't a concern)
- Sliced strawberries or blueberries
- A sprinkle of oats

Don't forget to share!

Step 1

Step 2

Step 3

Make it:

Spread the apple slices on a plate, drizzle with seed/nut butter, and add berries and a sprinkle of oats.

Fuel fact:

Fruits and veggies come in lots of different colors. Each color gives your body different nutrients that help you grow, play, learn, and stay healthy!
